The EU's chief negotiator said there was still anger at Brussels in many regions of Europe. He said Brexit had exposed the dangers and consequences of leaving the bloc, but said it was up to the EU to prove membership of the bloc was worthwhile. We need to learn the lessons of Brexit. We need to understand why 52% of the British people voted against Europe [...] It is of course too late for the UK, but it is not too late for the other Member States, said Mr Barnier. He said: Today, in many regions, there is this anger, the same feeling against Europe, the same problem to understand what we are doing at European level, he said. We must be vigilant, because it is always a risk to the future, he added. This risk can be combated by the evidence that it is clearly a better situation to be inside the EU than outside. Brexit has laid bare the consequences of leaving the EU for all to see, he said, even though we have a deal of UK choices mean there are inevitable short- and long-term consequences. He added: Together we can build a Europe that not only protects, but also inspires. A Europe that Europeans would never dream of leaving. Why should we leave the EU debate to anti-EU parties? For anyone who believes in the European project, this is not the time to sit back and be complacent. Mr Barnier said he had noted that Britain's plans to deviate from EU rules, such as the post-Brexit working time directive. We are not surprised, because we are not naive, said Mr Barnier. The most important thing for the EU was that Britain's new-found freedom did not become a tool to dump against us. If Britain were to undermine EU standards to gain an unfair competitive advantage over European companies, Mr Barnier said, the bloc would not hesitate to use corrective measures, including tariffs, in the trade deal. In that case, we will use the tools the treaty, he said. Mr Barnier will soon step down as the EU's chief negotiator to become a special adviser to Ursula von der Leyen, the President of the European Commission. His focus will be on implementing the withdrawal agreement and ratifying Brexit trade. Brexit trade. From March he wants to return to French politics. He was speaking after being named European of the Year by the European Movement Ireland.Scientists call for gradual and lengthy transition from lockdown, arguing rules should not be relaxed until May on the earliestLawmaker stunt intended to go nowhere with Democratic-controlled House and SenateA existing compensation scheme only covers people on benefitsKate shared a candid update on her husband's condition. Vaccines that use harmless viruses as a delivery mechanism are vulnerable to being attacked by our immune system - but experimenting with how they are given could get around this. Britain and the European Union are at odds with the British government's refusal to give EU representatives full diplomatic status in London after Brexit. As an EU member state for 46 years, Britain voted to leave in a 2016 referendum, and completed its tortuous journey out of the bloc on December 31, when Brexit took full effect. The BBC reported that the Foreign Office refused to grant the same diplomatic status and privileges to EU Ambassador Joao Vale de Almeida and his team as it gives to envoys of countries, on the basis that the EU is not a nation state. Apparent U-turn by Pentagon officials could raise questions about police responseSchools could open for Easter, Gavin Williamson has suggested, saying he will issue a two-week warning to school principals. The Education Minister said he would certainly hope that children would be back in the classroom by early April, adding that he wants this to happen at the earliest possible opportunity. It is the first time Mr Williamson has hinted at a possible timeline for reopening schools, and comes after Dr Jenny Harries, the deputy chief medical officer, suggested schools in some parts of the country will reopen earlier than those in others. Primary and secondary schools had to close at the beginning of this month for everyone except the children of key workers and the most vulnerable young people. Announcing the latest national lockdown on January 4, Boris Johnson said schools should remain closed until the February half-term at the earliest. On Thursday, Mr Williamson said a key factor in determining when schools could reopen would be whether the pressure on the NHS had been sufficiently eased. He told BBC Radio 4's Today programme that headteachers will be given absolutely the right notice about when they need to prepare for reopening, adding that a clear two-week notice period will be taken into account so schools have time to prepare for the return of pupils. Schools were the last to close, schools will be the first to said the Minister of Education. I want to see that as soon as the scientific and health advice is available to open as early as possible, and I certainly hope that would be before Easter. Any decision to reopen schools to all children - like all decisions in terms of schools - will be based on the best health advice and the best scientific science The presenter's husband has been in hospital since March last year. It is too early to say when the national coronavirus lockdown in England will end, British Prime Minister Boris Johnson said on Thursday, as daily deaths from COVID-19 reach new highs and hospitals are increasingly stretched. A prevalence survey, known as REACT-1, suggested infections had not fallen in the first days of lockdown, although the government has said the effect of national restrictions introduced on January 5 was not yet reflected in the figures. England's third national lockdown has seen bars, restaurants and schools mostly closed, with Johnson admitting a steep rise in cases at the end of last year to a more transmissible variant of coronavirus first in England.De editor of Mail On Sunday has detailed a meeting he had with a source from the palace. He quoted himself from Terminator 2, encouraging others to follow his example and get vaccinated. Come with me if you want to live! he said. On Wednesday, he thanked Eric Garcetti, mayor of Los Angeles, for checking into Dodger Stadium, where he received the vaccine. Garcetti was quick to point out that Schwarzenegger had only had his first dose of the vaccine. He'll be back - for his second dose, Garcetti said.
