Rome revealed This is a National Geographic documentary series narrated by Kieran Bew, looking at every aspect of Roman life using interviews and a dramatic reconstruction to restore the empire's epic history. The Roman Empire in the first century This is a PBS documentary series narrated by Sigourney Weaver, exploring the first hundred years of the Roman Empire. As legend has it, Rome was founded by Romulus and Remus, the Twin Sons of Mars, the god of war. Left to drown in a basket of Tiber by the king and rescued she-wolf, the twins lived to defeat that king and found their city on the river banks in 753 B.C. After killing his brother, Romulus became the first King of Rome named after him. The Roman era of the monarchy ended in 509 B.C when it became a republic. The monarch's power was given to two judges elected each year, called consuls. Although the judges were chosen by the public, the magistrates were dominated by the descendants of the original senators from the romulus era. The policy at the beginning of the republic was marked by a long struggle between patricians and plebeians (ordinary people). In the early republics, the Roman state grew exponentially with both size and power. Rome's complex political institutions, however, began to collapse under the weight of a growing empire, ushering in an era of internal turmoil and violence. In 27 B.C. Augustus rule restored Roman morality after a century of discord and corruption and ushered in the famous two centuries of peace and prosperity. Rome finally collapsed under the weight of its pompous empire, losing its provinces one by one. In September 476, Prince Odovacar, a Germanic prince, won control of the Roman Army. After the destruction of the last Western emperor, Romulus Augustus, Odovacar's forces proclaimed him the King of Italy, bringing ancient Rome to a long, disgusted history.
